

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A microstrip-waveguide transition for transmission of electromagnetic energy includes a waveguide having an open end, a dielectric substrate attached to the open end, a microstrip probe on the dielectric substrate, wherein a capacitive susceptance occurs across the open end when the open end is exposed to electromagnetic energy and wherein the capacitive susceptance is countered with inductive susceptance.